

REMEMBERING OUR FALLEN FIRE FIGHTERS

by Scott Mellott, Retired

April 27th 2009 marks the 110th anniversary of Houston's first Fire Fighter Line-of-Duty Death, Ed Thompson. Thompson entered the Houston Fire Department January 1, 1897. He was assigned to Station #5 at 910 Hardy as a "Pipeman" (Fire Fighter) and died while the Hose Wagon he was riding on was racing to a house fire.

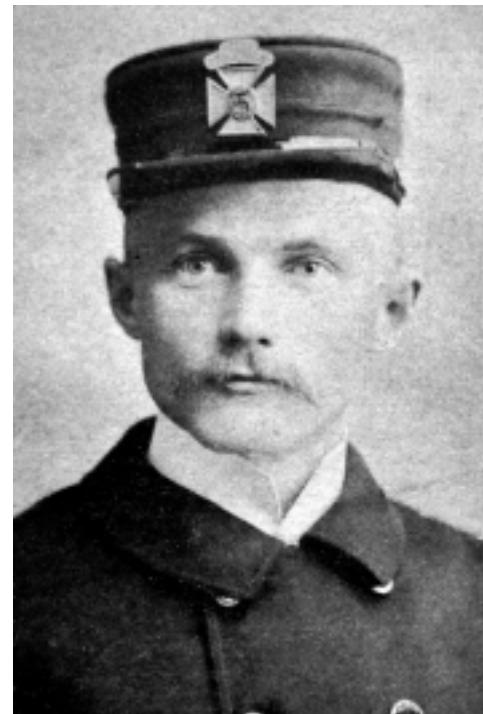

To set this story up, let me put a few things into perspective. In 1899, most of Houston's streets were dirt with only a few paved with bricks. There were a few automobiles in the area – horses or horse driven vehicles were the main mode of transportation. Each call the Fire Fighters made, at break-neck speed, was as dangerous as the fire they had to fight when they arrived on the scene.

On the day of Thompson's death, there were four men riding on Hose Wagon #5 with him. The Driver, Henry Donnelly (who was one of Houston's first paid Fire Fighters), began his 50 year career in 1895 and retired in 1945. The Captain, Ed Franks, was also one of the first paid Fire Fighters serving the HFD for 29 years. The two "Pipemen" riding on the back with Ed were James Fitzgibbons and Fred Seibert. Fitzgibbon's career had just begun and he went on to serve about 14 more years. Fred Seibert who served as Fire Chief twice in his 35 year career started in 1898 and retired in 1933.

The accident that killed Ed Thompson occurred shortly after 1:00 p.m. The hose wagon he rode was in route to a house fire on Crockett Street. The location was just a little over 3 miles from Station #5. The house fire was close to Houston Avenue. However, Houston Avenue, at the time, was in bad shape and the Fire Fighters had to take another route when traveling in that direction. The street they were forced to use was Hickory, which still exists today. A railroad track that contained a very steep grade and a blind spot crossed Hickory Street, making the crossing very dangerous.

As Hose Wagon #5 approached the crossing, a railroad switch engine was pushing 11 cars across the intersection with three trainmen on top of the cars. With the combination of the noise of the wagon, the horses and the blind spot, the crew did not see the lead train car until after they were well up the grade of the crossing. Henry Donnelly, an experienced driver, knew he had no way to stop to avoid disaster and was forced to continue in order to try to keep his crew out of harms way. With the proper commands to the well trained horses, he was able to cross over the track – beating the lead train car to the crossing. The three men sitting in the back of the wagon knew their only chance to survive the collision was to jump out of the back of the wagon. Fitzgibbons and Seibert were the first to jump with Thompson right behind them. The first two men landed clear of the train tracks, when Thompson jumped he fell backwards onto the tracks.

The funeral service was held the next day. Hose Wagon #5 transported the Fire Fighter to Glenwood Cemetery where he was buried in the "Fireman's Plot". Ed Thompson was survived by his wife and seven children.
